"You ain't thought of the library, Lucy. You remember how your Uncie Henry always talked about it. He had been years collecting those old books. Lots of them go as far back as the Revolution, and some of the oldest were printed in England before there was any America. Don't you remember how he used to walk up and down this room and shake his head at the books, saying. 'Emmy, there's thousands in this room, thousands!' I know he paid ridiculous prices for some of them. Maybe there's others as daffy about old books as he was."

John's face brightened, and he took both of Lucy's hands in his.

There were thousands in it. Neither discovered on that eventful morning, but this did not prevent their rejoicing greatly over the turn in events or their attending in a body the wedding of John and Lucy, which six months the problem of t

It Seared the Chef Worse Than It Did Ris Assistant.

Pat was assistant cook on one of the dining cars on the Great Western road running into St. Paul. He was obstinate and ill tempered. The chef was equally so, and as a result constant warfare waged between them. One hot day Pat was making ice cream and in spite of the chef's warnings insisted upon sitting in the doorway of the pantry while he turned the freezer. The train, going up grade, made a sudden lurch, and Pat and his can of ice cream fell out the door, as his superior officer had predicted. THE COLONIAL.

So much has been said about Klaw & Erlanger's production of "Ben Hur," which is now at the Colonial Theatre, in Boston, that it would seem superfluous to repeat again any terms of seemic and mechanic effects is the unquestioned centre of interest, and it is the great number and variety, and a superior excellence of the whole series, that make the entertainment what it is—an unparalleled success of the kind. It appeals, in the first place, very strongly to the curiosity of the great reading public. To tell its story in dramatic action alone, would be impossible. The acts and doings of its character are so intimacily associated with momentous events, and thriling physical and material circumstances that to present the solution of the committee of the work and the state of the successive of the centre of the successive of the centre of the successive o THE COLONIAL.

Mr. Methuselah

RICHARD BARKER SHELTON

Copyright, 1902, by R. B. Shelton

There was an air of subdued excitement in the Twentieth National. For the third time Billy Reynolds, lounging in the window as he pored over the sporting page of the morning paper, looked up at the clock and then at the little group perched on a nearby table and said, "Where in time is Mr. Me-thuselah?" For the third time the wagging heads of the group announced their ignorance. It was twenty min-utes of 9, and, according to all precedent, the paying teller was already a half hour late. Ed Frost slipped down sald Frost.

All that morning, through the routine work of the Twentieth National, there was a feeling, shared allke by every man in the bank, that something was lacking. It must be admitted that the paying teller was not a popular man. He never went to the ball games; he never bought chances in the raffles. Yet, for all that, he was considered a fixture at the Twentieth National, as much of a fixture as the arithmometers or the brass screens. One would have as soon expected the vaults to take a vacation as Mr. Methauslah. As to where that name originated it would be difficult to determine, but the name was more or less of a fit, for the paying teller was little and stoop shouldered and balldheaded. His face was wizened and wrinkled.

Billy rose from the window. "It's ten minutes of 9." said he. "Where in creation is Methuseiah?" He folded the papers and the papers. Billy rose from the window for the paper and put it in his pocket. "Go you three to one, George, he comes in late."

At closing time that afternoon Paine went over to Frost's desk. "Going to the game?" said he.

"Wait a minute or two, will you?" Frost answered. "See'f i can find this shortage. Somehow I'm rattled without old Methuselah around."

"What do you suppose has got into the old codger?" Frost asked as they boarded a car a half hour later. "When he begins to take a vacation, I feel all broken up myself."

Paine laughed. "Say," said he, "im agine old Methuselah trying to enjoy himself. It would take about three fuerals ad any to keep him in his normal condition."

Paine cleared his throat, and Methuselah, looking very much like an animal at bay, mumbled, "Go on."

In the World.

The only church in the world so far as is known that is also a lighthouse is St. Phillip's church, Charleston, S. C. St. Phillip's, which is one of the oldest churches in America, is known as the "Westminster abbey of South Carolina," because within and about its walls so many distinguished men lie burled, including John C. Calhoun. The history of the old church is closely interwoven with that of South Carolina, and many of the most celebrated events in the history of the province are connected with it.

It is one of the sights of Charleston, and strangers are always taken to see

1, 2, Saul yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord.

What an evil breath he had! The word translated "breathing out" is used only this once and means to breathe in or out, to breathe, to live. His very life was to hate Christ and Christians, and yet the time came when he could truly say, "For me to live is Christ" (Phil. I, 21). Our first introduction to him is in chapters vil. 58; vili, I, 3, in connection with the death of Stephen and the persecution following, which at this time was still going on. Saul's own account of his life in those days is found in chapters xxii, 3, 4; xxvi, 9-11; Gal. I, 13, 14, but in Eph. ii, 1-3, he speaks of it all as being under the prince of the power of the air.

3. 4. Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou and strangers are always taken to see it and shown its graves and monuments.

The most remarkable feature of the old church, however, is the fact that tits lofty steeple serves the purpose of a lighthouse and is used to guide the seafarer and mariner safely into the port of Charleston. The use of the steeple as a lighthouse dates back to 1894, when the United States lighthouse department succeeded by dint of repeated efforts in inducing the vestry of the old church to allow a lantern to be

The light used is very powerful and is placed at an altitude of about 125 feet above the ground, so that it is easily visible thirty miles at sea. Ships making for Charleston harbor at night always keep a sharp lookout for St. Phillip's light and as soon as they sight it get it into line with the beacon on Fort Sumer and then make a straightaway run for the mouth of the jettles and up through them into the harbor of Charleston.

A Mindoo Superstition.

When visits are exchanged by the friends of the Hindoo bride and groom to complete arrangements for the wedding, great attention is paid to omens, which are considered especially potent then. For instance, if the groom's messengers should meet a cat, a fox or a serpent they turn back and seek a more propitious time for the errand. The Value of the Ruby.
The ruby is valued highest when it contains the least azure. The largest ruby that history speaks of belonged to Elizabeth of Austria, the wife of Charles IX. It was almost as big as a hen's egg. The virtues attributed to rubies are to banish sadness, to repress luxury and to drive away annoying thoughts. At the same time it symbolizes cruelty, angre and carnage, as well as boldness and bravery. A change in its color announces a calamity, but when the trouble is over it regains its primitive luster.

ON THE FORT KANE TRAIL By Cicely Allen

Gloomy indeed had Christmas day been in the little cabin snuggled

Teddy and Freddy, the Squire twins, had listened with blinking eyes to their mother's faltering explanation that the old chap could not get across the range, but when they had cuddled beneath their own buffalo robe and at a safe distance from the maternal eye could induge in a few unmanly tears they privately a system of the same distance from the maternal eye could induge in a few unmanly tears they privately a system of the same factors. Today hope fairly died within them. A gray pall seemed to fall upon the narrow gulch and the mountains. Even the flames in the deep fireplace refused to dance, and the logs sulked blackly. Mrs. Squire had been called to the nearest ranch by the illness of the one neighbor she had known in this desolate western home. Her husband had gone away, istensibly in search of deer meat. Perhaps in reality he wanted to get beond sight of those four pathetic, questioning eyes, for there was absolutely not a dollar in the house with which to placate Santa Claus. Indeed it was a gray question how the Squire establishment would be run until spring. Nearer and nearer came the sound.
The boys stood on tiptoe at the window. Ah, he was turning in from the dow. Ah, he was turning in from the trail! There were two of him and on

The disappointment was too great—nothing but cowboys and rough looking ones at that!
Freddy pulled himself together and with innate western hospitality told the men to come in.
"Ef you want to see pop, you'd better wait," he volunteered. "He's gone to track a deer, but he'll be home 'bout supper time."
The taller man of the two punched

It certainly seemed to the twins that never had they seen men eat as did these strange guests.
"I wouldn't mind havin' a bit more of that bacon," remarked the tall man as the plates became bare.
"They ain't any more," said Freddy, with the frankness of youth, "ner any more beans."

The afternoon shadows were beginning to fall when Freddy was called from wrestling with the unruly fire by an exultant shout from Teddy, who clung desperately to his watch at the window.

"They's somethin' comin', Ted! I hear it!"

Their hearing, sharpened by long days and nights in mountain silences, caught the distant plunk, plunk of an approaching horse. There ought to approaching horse. The tall man straightened up as if the name he had not heard in years, "Jimmy," hurt him. He picked up the other man's coat and took from its pockets some odd shaped, knobby bundles. Then he came back to the bedside and gripped the hand that lay outside the gray blanket.

The Cheyenne papers two days later announced in glaring headlines that the body of Jim Cosgrove, one of the most notorious stage robbers of the Little Basin district, had been found in a hotel room at Golden. "Deserted in His Dying Hour by His Comrade," ran one of the subheads.

MOST NOTED SEXTON. the Aristocracy of the City at Grace Church, and His Name

Adorns a Tablet on Its Walls. It used to be said that a stranger who was visiting New York for the first time and asked his hotel clerk for advice as to what he should do on Sunday morning would find his doubts quickly reduced to the alternative, "Go over to Brooklyn and hear Beecher" or "Go to Grace church and see Brown." No prelate of the Episcopal church was so widely known either in or beyond his New York diocese as this vallant guardian of old Grace, whose income it was estimated, was greater than power in society was even more feared power in society was even more feared than that of any bishop.

He received his appointment as sexton from the Rev. Dr. Thomas House Taylor, and, while Dr. Taylor has been long forgotten, Sexton Brown is still almost as much remembered in the great city as Jim Fisk, A. T. Stewart or Charles Delmonico.

Brown would cultivate the acquaintance of head waiters and cooks, securing the latest information as to the social plans of their masters and mistresses, and whenever he learned that their arrival and departure in their carriages. Beginning in this humble way, it was not long before he gained the good will of distinguished patrons. His authoritative manner, too, was admirable for such occasions. Indeed the host himself could hardly issue a command to his menials with the suavely peremptory emphasis which Brown employed. Such was his deportment and such his trustworthy zeal that it was said that no one in Grace church could be properly feasted or buried or could even say his prayers without the assistance of Brown, and eventually it became something like a dictum in a large portion of society that nobody could be married in New York in truly first class style unless

In western Turkey it is necessary to close an umbrella on meeting people of high rank, and a European traveler who was passing one of the palaces of the sultan was nearly run through by the guard before he comprehended that he must put down the open umbrella he carried. Every one passing the actual residence of the sultan lowers his umbrella as a salutation to "the brother of the sun and the moon."

A Kitten's Intelligence.

A hungry kitten was put into a cage, the door of which would fall open when a loop of wire that hung in front of the cage was pulled down an inch. The kitten tried to squeeze between the bars, clawed and bit at them, thrust its paws out between the bars and clawed at various loose objects in the cage. It clawed the various oose objects in the cage. It clawed the various passes of the little glass bulls and cluckled as he theremometer, slipped in shead, pressed one of his fat fingers to

The two kyorsemen had pushed four miles in the well of the storm before they spoke of the twins. They had stopped under shelfer of an overhanging rock to tighten up girths and to gather fresh prengift from the finsks which they drew from their hip pockets. The shorter man leaned werely large and the ware strictly enforced north of the Tweed it would go hard with the play against his faithful horse.

"Seems a good many years, Jim, sence the ole lady tilled our stockin's an' fold us stuff about Santa Claus, What was it.—The hight before Christmas?" Great stuff we thought it.

The Battle of Stones Which Marks
Beginning of New Year.
One of the most curious customs in Korea marks the advent of the new year. This is the battle with stones. participated in by inhabitants of Seoul. At a spot about a mile and a half outside the city walls, on the main road to the Han river, the people assemble by thousands either as witnesses of or participants in this truly remarkable exhibition of warlike good will. By previous arrangement piles of stones are la readiness, all carefully selected and of a convenient size.

heaps again or fetch fresh ammunition for the firing line. Then the clash comes, the two bodies meet, fierce rushes are made, stones are discarded, and knives and clubs are freely used. The clash of weapons, the screams of the combatants, the surging mass of men, some being trampled to death, now falling, now struggling to their feet, the whole goes to make a picture that depicts anything but the Joy we attribute to the coming of a new year. The fight is kept up until the clang of the great city bell tells the combatants that it is time to return home.

Perhaps the most singular feature of the celebration is that during the remaining eleven months of the year

But, cowards or no cowards, the Korean people still indulge, as they have for years, in this annual warlike welcome of the new year. Indeed it is legal in Korea to fight not only on New Year's day, but during the first moon or month of the year. The custom has become a national institution, sanctioned by the government and patronized by the king and the nobility. The police attend the battles, but merely to keep order among the spectators. ### Good for Rheumatism

Last fall I was taken with a very sever Last lait. I was taken with a very severe attack of nuscular rheumatism which caused me great pain and annoyance. After trying several prescriptions and rheumatic cures, I decided to use Chamberlam's Pain Balm which I had seen advertised in the South Jerseyman. After two applications of this Remedy I was much better, and after using one bottle, was completely cured.—Sallie Harris, Salem, N. J. For sale by all druggists.

In Woodbrook Cemetery a lot has been set apart by the Commissioners for the burial of Woburn men who kave, or who may have, served in the Army or the Navy of the United States in time of war and who have no private ground for a final resting place.

This lot has been graded and the remains of those buried in the old small lot and of those in other public grounds of the cemetery have been exhumed and reinterred in the new lot.

At this time thete is nothing to indicate that there is a soldiers' lot nor to suggest who have been buried there. A soldiers' lot without some enduring memorial to designate the reason for its existence is an anomaly. It, indeed, looks as though the wave of patriotism that inspired it and brought it to its present state of incompletion had subsided and left it a stranded, nameless wreck.

The friends and comrades of those who are interred there feel that this should not be, that the memory of these men and such as these should be perpetuated in some enduring form by the prescut generation who are immediate beneficiaries of their willing services and cheerful sacrifices. To this end a committee of twenty, or more, one half of whom are veterans, has been appointed who will bring this matter to the attention of the patriotic people of Woburn and give them an opportunity to contribute something of their means to the object suggested.

Capatian E. F. Wyer is Chairman of the Committee; George E. Fowle, secretary, and Winthrop Hammond, treasure.—X.

HORSES OF VENICE.

At 1 o'clock the other morning a well dressed man strolled into one of the uptown messenger offices. He had been dining out and evidently, from the rakish tilt to his opera hat, the dinner had been a success.

"I want a messenger boy to come and waken me ip the morning."

"What hour?" The clerk was all business, for the request was not unusual.

"Seven o'clock. I've got to catch train," he explained.

"All right, sir; 7 o'clock," assured the clerk.

The man turned as he was going out of the door. "Have the boy hammer the door hard," he cautioned. "I'm a 'dead one' when I get to sleep, and I've got to catch that train." Then he went home and went to sleep with absolute confidence.

The horses on the top of St. Mark's are famous and have had a trying experience. They date back to the preshistoric age and are supposed to be the work of a Greek artist named Lyssippus and designed for a sculptured chariot. They were taken to Rome during the empire and first used as ornaments upon a triumphal arch erected by Nero and afterward by Trajan. The Emperor Constantine took them from Rome to Constantinople, where the Doge Dandolo selzed them as loot and brought them to Venice. When Napoleon entered the city in 1797, he had front of the postoffice told him that the stage had arrived. He stalked down the flower edged path to meet it. When the stage plunged and swayed past the cabin, Mrs. Rollins waved her hand to her husband, sitting straight and smilling beside the rough driver. Then she ran into the house, where, burying her face in her husband's big chair, she had a hearty cry.

On and on swung the stage, Bill chatting amiably of his former triumphs when the vigilantes repre-

"Here, you triangulated sine qua non of a perambulator, shut up:"

Bill stopped in the middle of a mighty oath and stared at the missionary in amazement. So preachers lost their temper, and such a quiet chap as Preacher Rollins too!

Bill forgot the condition of the road while he ruminated over this fact. Then they struck an ugly stone, a mailbag flew through space, and Bill and the struck and sugner the struck of the road wallbag flew through space, and Bill

The Reverend John came out of his trance and silpped into the waiting coat. His wife cast an adoring look up at his square shouldered six feet one.

"I hated to interrupt your thoughts, Jack, but the stage is due in a minute. Were you thinking of your sermon?"

"Not much, my girl," replied Rollins. "I was thinking of that twenty-four mile ride with Whacker Bill. It is honestly the worst feature of this charge. I like to go over to Las Vegas. lated this ancedote of a picture collector of his acquaintance, an irascible country squire: The old gentleman frequently dined with his country neighbors and drove home, often several miles, late at night. Once, after dining heavily, he fell asleep and did not wake when the carriage drew up before his home. The coachman made the usual halt—it was the old man's custom to let himself out—and then supposing his passenger had alighted, drove to the stable.

Some time later, while enjoying a late supper, the butter inquired his master's whereabouts. Was he spending the night out? A brief dismayed colloquy ensued, but they divined the situation and rose to it. Tiptoeing steatifily out to the coachbouse, they peeped into the carriage, beheld its slumbering occupant, cautiously led out and reharnessed the horses and drove him, still snoring, back to his own front door, where the butter ventured to awake him and obsequiously ushered him in.

Healing the sick or raising the dead or simply tarrying with Simon, the tanner, God was glorified in Peter. He does not want work so much as fruit, and there may be much fruit when one seems compelled to live in apparent idleness. Ccipples Held the Stage

A very remarkable theatrical fad raged in Paris sixty or seventy years ago. The journals of the period show that the writers of plays had an especial fondness for the representation of bodily deformitles and infirmitles. It was well known, of course, that Victor Hugo made a hunchback the hero of a tragedy and that one of Scribe's heroes stuttered. But the many forgotten plays by the forgotten authors of the period also swarm with hunchbacks, stutterers, the lame, the halt, the blind and the deaf and dumb. Sometimes as many as a dozen of

The law respecting "Old Home Week" provides in substance: The week commencing the last Sunday in July, each year, shall be Old Home Week; week help and cities and towns may appropriate funds for celebrations in honor of re-turning sons and daughters of the Com-monwealth, and other invited guests. Cities, by their Councils, and towns at Cities, by their Councils, and towns at legal town meetings, may make appropriation for the same. In pursuance of these provisions, and in compliance with the recommendations and instructions of the Secretary of State, the Woburn City Council have chosen an "Old Home" Committee, and it now remains for the citizens to elect a similar one, the two to act together in lar one, the two to act together making provisions for the proper celeyear. It is high time that the people' committee were raised, and operation for the celebration inaugurated.

The proposition to buy another eam roadroller causes a good deal of 19, anniversary of the Battle of Lexfriction and some hard talk in the City Council. At the last week's meeting of the Board, after a hot discussion, the order for the purchase of the roller, or to make the necessary oppropriation for it, failed to pass, the vote standing 7 to 7 with one absent. Now it is as well known as anything can be that no second roller is needed by the City, and most of the men who vote for it know it. If the question of purchase were substituted a regular vote the August 1. Council. At the last week's meeting it. If the question of purchase were sub-mitted to a popular vote, the JOURNAL believes that 4 out of every 5 would vote against it. It is hard to find a man vote against it. WINCHESTER.

The necessity for more schoolroom in this town becomes plainer to be seen every month. There exists what the school authorities call a state of congestion, which must be speedily relieved or our educational interests will suffer. At a hearing given on the matter last week several plans were suggested, but that for a new High School was the most favorably received. It is recognized that Winchester is making rapid strides in population and that not only is more schoolroom needed now, but the day is not far distant when a larger High School building will become an absolute necessity and must be built. And when this is underlies that we have their functional duty to the body, and the lachrymal gland is not placed behind the eye simply to fill space or to give expression to emotion, says an exchange.

It looks to me as though Hon.
Abijah Thompson had hidden goodbye to this town for good and all. He has sold his fine residence property on Church street, bought a farm and residence at Yarmouth, Maine, a short distance below Portland, and lives in Boston in winter. This looks like a permanent abandonment of the old home, but why? is what puzzles me. I shall believe the McKay Works are going to leave here when I see the goods loaded onto the cart, and not before. To be sure they may leave and go to Beverly, but if they do, Winchester will be able to weather the cape, and be none the worse off for it. Unless I am greatly mistakened, it will be found that Winchester will grow faster than ever this season.

Was he one? Yes—no! A flush not born of the sun flooded his face. His mind traveled back twenty-four hours, and he cursed his weakness, his timidity, which he had never realized until that awful storm had broken. It was when the terrific lightning, peculiar to this region, had played about him that he had suddenly found himself trembling, gasping with horror. The memory of those moments still sickened him and filled him with contemptuous self hate.

Queer Freaks of Flowers.

"Why is it," complained the man with a grouch to a restaurant keeper yesterday, "that you fellers hardly ever have any flowers in your old joints?"

The hash founder looked up. "Flowers won't live in restaurants," he said. "The snoke and odor of the cooking seems to smother them, and they never thrive. I've tried it dozens of times, and always with the same result. Put flowers in a saloon, though, and they grow and bloom in splendid shape. The tobacco smoke, I suppose, serves as a fumigator, and the fumes of the liquor apparently stimulate them. If you want to make a success of flowers, put them in a grogshop. To stunt or kill them, a restaurant is the best ever."—Duinth News-Tribune.

So Prue sat down among them and listened while they talked away about the folks at home. She watched them doing up small packages in white tissue paper with red and green ribbons. "These are belated offerings," they said. "We were up till 1 last night typing up things. Hope we didn't disturb you. We do jabber so. It's such fun to make up the presents—lots of crinkly paper and gay ribbons, you see, and not much else. We can't give anything that costs over 10 or 15 cents, so we have to make the magnificence of the parcel counterbalance the humility of the gift. It looks like a sin to send such trash, but it reminds kinfolk and friends that we think lovingly of them. Besides, if folks didn't buy trash, what would become of the stores and the salesladies and cashboys they employ? Where would their Christmas be if all of us were too wise to buy foolishly?" The head worker was much pleased with Miss Dolly's appearance and with the way the tire woman helped about the Christmas tree and the children. So also were the deaconess and the curate. It took only a day or two for Prue to find a lot of people to love. No young woman who visited the settlement had so many people to love her in so short a time. The deaconess made her useful in the mission. She had a recognized place in the den. She had found a niche.

Margaret and Anne came back from Margaret and Anne came back from the mission in a flutter.

Lung power and capacity may be wonderfully increased and strengthen-ed by a constant repetition of the syl-lable "ah" on the three or four notes lable "ah" on the three or four notes in the middle register of the voice—that is, the three or four notes which one sings most naturally and with the least effort. Let the pupil get one note clear cat, round, full and musical; then from that note as a starting point let him go up and down, gradually working out the huskiness from the adjacent notes and sounding them until they become pure and resonant and can be delivered without strain or effort.

Let him work systematically and, above all, avoid the pernicious trick of learning "pieces" by rote or by ear. In the house.

Prue's room was in reality a slice cut off the den by a thin partition, against which Margaret's and Anne's folding bed stood on one side and Prue's co on the other. In the night Anne shook Margaret. "Listen:" she whispered.

Through the wall came the sound of weeping.

For a time the girls lay quite still, but presently Margaret whispered:
"I can't stand it any longer. It sounds as if her heart were breaking. Let's go to her."

In a few minutes they were in the time the principle of the voice, and to that is, the three or four notes which one sings most naturally and with the sacred animals. There were many shrines that could not afford to buy a shrine that feet animals. There were many shrines that could not afford to buy a shrine that point in the nidder effort. His first effort should be to increase the purity and range of his voice, and to that end he should, as suggested above, use the broad syllable "ah" only for a time, and on no account should he try to sing an air until he can do so understandingly, with a full knowledge of musical notation and a perfect command of his vocal resources.

A FAMOUS HIGHWAY.

The Cumberland Road, Which Was Projected by Henry Clay.

The Way Whale Hunters Are Sometimes Fooled by "Spouting." in the United States early in the nine-teenth century was the so called Cum-berland road, which was to extend from Cumberland, Md., through south-western Pennsylvania, över the Alle-gliany mountains to the Ohlo at Wheel-ling, W. Va., and then on to St. Louis. It was so well constructed that it is a good road today. Henry Clay was its projector and chief supporter, and his services in its health are commemorat.

projector and cher supporter, and his services in its behalf are commemorated by a monument near Wheeling. We are told by letters written at that period that "there were sometimes twenty gayly painted four horse coaches each way daily. The cattle and sheep were never out of sight, and canvast covered wagons were drawn by six to twelve horses."

On this great road, which eventually passed into the hands of the states through which it runs, the government expended no less a sum than $7.000,000. Within a mile of it on either side the country was a wilderness, but on the highway itself the traffic was as dense as in the main street of a large town. Ten miles an hour was the usual speed for coaches. From Baltimore to Wheeling ran lines of freight wagons, which raried ten tons, drawn by twelve whorses and with wheels ten feet in diameter.—Pearson's Magazine. ameter.-Pearson's Magazine.

The lemming is a species of rodent and resembles in some ways our common water rat. Once started, these strange creatures press on in a straight line. There is no checking their march. If a wall or a house is in their way, they will try to climb it rather than go around it, and if they come to a stack of corn they will eat it and then go forward. The lemmings are good swimmers, and so they do not mind rivers and ponds, although they cannot keep and ponds, although they cannot keep afloat in rough water.

A touch of a bell brought the head clerk with a series of especially printed lists. They were the way bills, expenses, list of stopping places, relays of horses and similar tables. All the preparations for the carrying out of the duke's daring experiment had been made.

That evening found the duke speeding northward, and next morning he recorded the first vote of his long series. Then a special whirled him into the west county, where he voted before dinner time at no less than three boroughs. At every stopping point stood a barouche and four waiting to bear him at a gallop to the voting booths. And that was only the first of many days.

A Wooden Statue In Tokyo.

In Tokyo, the capital of Japan, there exists a gigantic statue of a woman made of wood and plaster and dedicated to Hachiman. the god of war. In height it measures fifty-four feet. The head alone, which is reached by a winding stairway in the interior of the figure, is large enough to comfortably hold twenty persons. The figure holds a huge wooden sword in one hand, the blade of the weapon being twenty-seven feet long, and a ball twelve feet in diameter in the other.

Internally the figure is fitted up with an extraordinary anatomical arrangement, supposed to represent the different portions of the brain. A fine view of the country is obtained by looking through one of the eyes of the statue.

What makes them so great in the use of the sling is the training given them from their earliest years by their mothers, who set up a piece of bread hung at the end of a rod for a target and let their children remain without food until they have hit it, when the child who is the victor receives the bread as the reward of his skill and patience."

Not the Gardener.

When in 1883 Professor Freeman was examining Battle abbey, he found himself dogged by a person who, as be thought, somewhat officiously obtruded his offers of assistance.

After valuly trying to shake him off he broke forth with: "I don't want your assistance. The Duke of Cleveland promised that I should not be interfered with by the gardeners."

Then Lilian gave a gasp. She ran to the end of the steamer nearest the dock only to find that the vessel had begun to move. She uttered a cry which attracted the attention of a youngish man sitting on the piles at the corner of the piler hanging his heels over the water.

He jumped up and whistled, for he realized the full enormity of the situation. She was going, and he was to be left behind. The ocean would separate them, besides a sea of misunderstandings. His bluff had worked beyond his expectations.

He ran to the stemmer's starting place and found a stout commercial looking man in a state of great excitement bargianing with the owner of a small tug to take him to the outgoing steamer. Nicholas joined forces with him. A common object—to catch the steamer-bound them together.

"Anything on for tonight, Stanley?"
"Not that I know of, Birch," answered Harvey Stanley, looking up from his sample cases. He represented Bemis & Co. in their southeastern territory. "Just got in last night and haven't had time to see anybody yet."

"Marlan, don't you remember me?"
Oh, the joy of it and back of it the pathos! The doorkeeper heard it and smay centuries an unexplored and unswown waste.

"Well," exclaimed Birch, lighting a fresh cigar, "I'd like your help, then for a few hours. There's a gang in from the west, fresh from a meeting of the Implement Dealers' association, and we've got to entertain them to night. I've orders to do the thing urifight; no limit on the expense account."

"Sure," mumbled Stanley without removing his blue pencil from his mouth. "Meet you at the Palace hotel at dinner. What show?"

"The Alcazar, Prettiest bunch of chorus girls in town, and, if the men wani it, we'll get a few of them for the supper afterward."

A successful diver must possess great courage and nerves of steel. Such a man connected with a large wrecking company was visiting some years ago the pearl fisheries in the gulf of California, where sharks abounded. On one of his trips in quest of the pearl oyster he had a narrow escape from a fearful death.

He had been instructed never to stir from the bottom until he had looked up and around. Fortunately he heeded the advice. Having filled his bag he glanced quickly about and caught sight of a

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape. He worked for dear life and had the water thick with mud in less than half a min-

THE MEANING OF IT.

With no political campaign in prowith no political campaign in progress or pending, many people have been puzzled to account for the frequent meetings at the Central House of the Democratic City Committee this year.

The general opinion seemed to have been that the Democrats were doing the committee that the Democratic were doing be raised.

The general opinion seemed to have been that the Democrats were doing business on the wise old plan of "in time of peace prepare for war," but recent developements tend to disprove that therry and to point to other and less innocent causes for the unusual zeal and activity of the Party.

To put it bluntly, it now turns out that the Democratic City Committee are "running" the City Committee are committee sometimes and to wap the recalcitrants into line. The Party lash is not always effective.

For example: One of the ablest and honestest members of the Council has seen fit to oppose, by voice and vote, the purchase of another steam road roller. In the interests of the people, he has fought the shady scheme all the way through. This was contrary to the instructions of the City Committee, and he was summoned to appear at the Central House and take his medicine. He was warned more than once, and on the receipt of each letter, he being somewhat addicted to the use of profane language when excited, his words can better be imagined than described. He has not been near the Committee, but keeps right on voting against the roller. He supposes he has been read out of the Party.

The Committee found in Alderman Michael J. Greaney of Ward 7, a Democrat, a tough customer to deal

He had word of their coming and, gathering a goodly number of his friends around him, proceeded to the hose house and awaited the onset. His waiting was of short duration. Disembarking from the barge the subscommittee entered the room with their war paint on, and in a few minutes the circus began. Reporters said it was the hottest meeting they ever attempted to describe—it was redhot from start to finish. Several times knockdown to finish. Several times knockdown and dragout arguments were imminent, and just a little more powder would have produced the biggest riot Woburn has seen in many a day. Ald. Greaney atood his ground manfully. He defied the Democratic Committee to do their worst. He would vote against the roller scheme just as long as he had strength to hold a ballot in his hand. He and his friends could, he said, whin the chause of his vote on the road the chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be chause of his vote on the road to be commended to be a possible to be commended to be a possible to be commended do it too. The scene was better than a 3-ring circus, so the reporters said, but fortunately there were no cracked skulls.

Failing to discipline Ald. Greaney But Ald. Greaney's friends had in reserve a parting salute for them. It consisted of rotten eggs, brickbats, cobble stones, quantities of coarse gravel, decayed cabbages, etc., out of which the barge and its passengers finally escaped looking all the worse for the onslaught of Greaney's friends.

It is understood that the subcom-mittee reported Ald. Greaney in-corrigable, and he too will probably be out of the Party.

Last Monday evening a full meeting of the General Committee was held in Post 161 Hall, at which the most encouraging reports were received, and pledges of increased efforts in behalf of the cause made. The Veterans are in dead earnest in prosecuting this noble undertaking, and the cordial support and countenance which men outside the Posts are giving it indicate an early completion of the grand Memorial work. Enthusiasm and determination characterized the meeting.

The Committee found in Alderman Michael J. Greaney of Ward 7, a Democrat, a tough customer to deal with. He too was opposed to buying another roller, and the Committee with full power to insect the first people, an advocate of municipal economy, and therefore could not be cajoled or frightened into voting against their interests on the roller matter.

The abortive efforts of the Committee to induce Ald. Greaney to appear before them for discipline only strengthened their determination to bring him boats, staring steadily over the heaving brightness astern.

Something in the pensive droop of the small head intruded a sudden uncomfortable qualm into Harriet Ware's inner consciousness. The firm, mascu line penmanship tracing her niece's name and address on every one of the vanished letters rose before her mind's eye accusingly, like a veritable "writing on the wall." She took her conscience resolutely by the throat.

"I've made Hilda believe Mr. Forbes flitted her because of that absurd rumor about the loss of her fortune. I'll take care she continues to think so until it is too late to make any difference."

Mrs. Ware found her steamer chair, "There's Von Grundmann speaking to Hilda now," she meditated. "I imagine I can expedite matters much better if I flock by myself for awhile.

of Mr. Richard Forbes. I wouldn't like to meet him, though," with a little to meet him, though," with a little to meet him, though," with a little shiver, "when he reads that note I persuaded Hilda to leave for him."

She opened her magazine and dismissed from her thoughts the hapless Forbes. No prophetic vision was vouchsafed her of a luckless, wild eyed young man who the evening previous had thrown himself bodily on the platform of the moving Pullman at the Boston terminal, to the terror of the porter, and, with wrath, dismay and outraged love seething in his heart, had spent the hours of his journey in alternately gazing at his watch and reading over and over again a stray paragraph half way down the first page of the Boston Mercury.

The unconscious grace of the action fanned the passion in Von Grundmann's breast into flame.

"Hilda," he said abruptly and vehemently, "there is something I must say to you. I hadn't meant it to be so soon, but I can wait no longer. I love you, Hilda. Surely you must have realized what it would mean when you agreed to your aunt's hasty plan for us to cross together. Will you be my wife?"

Miss Ware turned at Von Grundmann's greeting. "Oh, good morning, captain," she said gravely, with a subtle touch of weariness in her voice. "Do you know how far we have come?"
"I'm not sure," replied the captain, "but i recollect hearing one of the offecers say something about the Shoats as I passed him. That means something like 300 miles nearer England, doesn't it?"

A brisk northeast wind, with justenough power in its elbow to send the long attantic swells in a creamy smooth or against the Lucania's bow, greeted Mrs. Ware as she came on deck.

"What a perfect morning" she said to herself, taking a deep breath. "Sea and sky look as if they had been scrubed. If Hilda has a particle of sense she'il pick up some spirits on such is morning."

Blunders of Painters.

A picture representing the four elements was essayed by an Italian artist, and he selected fish to indicate these, moles the earth and a salamander fire. The chameleon was intended as the allegorical representative of the air, but the painter, having no model of this animal and knowing nothing about its shape, contented himself by throducing a camel. He probably thought in his ignorance that from a similarity of sounds they were one and the same animal.

RISKS FIREMEN TAKE.

The Reason Engineer Brown Stack to His Dangerous Post. The risks that firemen in big cities take are an everlasting wonder, and the story of Bill Brown, as told by

At one time he was called upon to unite the daughter of the village mayor and a prominent attorney in the holy bonds of matrimony. Two little boys, knowing his determination to give them a portion of the sacred history touching Noah's marriage, hit upon the novel idea of pasting together two leaves in the family Bible so as to connect, without any apparent break, the marriage of Noah and the description of the ark of the covenant.

When the noted guests were all assembled and the contracting parties with attendants in their respective stations, the preacher began the ceremotions, the preacher began the ceremo-nies by reading the following text: "And when Noah was one hundred and forty years old he took unto himself a wife," then, turning the page, he continued, "300 cubits in length, 50 cubits in width and 30 cubits in depth and within and without beswerped with pitch." The story seemed a little strong, but he could not doubt the Bible, and, after reading it once more and reflecting a moment, he turned to the startled assemblage with these remarks, "My beloved brethren, this is the first time in the history of my life that my attention has been called to this important passage of the Scriptures, but it seems to me that it is one of the most forcible illustrations of the grand eternal truth that the nature of woman is exceedingly difficult to comprehend.—Starlight Messenger.

Value of Time.

The value of odd minutes is illustrated by a story told in a curious little volume of advice printed in England. Yes, money: but, you see, there are some of these newspaper men on my route who know me, and sometimes they have a batch of letters to mail and no stamps on hand. They drop the letters in and along with them the necessary amount of money I will do the rest. This is the only way I have ever found money in a mailbox.

Popular Weather Notions.

How often do we hear the remark, "We shall have rain, the atmosphere is so heavy." The reverse is true. When one sees smoke hanging from a chimney, with a tendency to sink to the ground, it indicates that the atmosphere is light—in fact, too light to float the smoke. When the smoke rises from the chimney, it indicates a heavy atmosphere. A column of smoke is not a bad barometer, for a barometer simply records the pressure of the atmosphere. When the atmosphere is light and the smoke settles, the pressure on the mercury is light, and the sure on the mercury is light, and the column falls, indicating storm. When the atmosphere is heavy and the smoke front and center through a strange mist that dimmed the outlines of the gate-post opposite.

The gray troop horse bent his head and softly nozzled the plump, heaving shoulders of the unhappy little Princess Susette.

The light of an inspiration came into the tear stained face of the princess. She sat down in the middle of the rond and peeled off her shoes and stockings. The little barelegged maid in stiff white lawn presented a queer figure of a princess as her highness paddled back to the sentry.

"Mr. Soldler," she began tentatively, but the speech died on her lips. She had just discovered that making figures in the dust with one's bare toe is the most fascinating amusement in the world. She was recalled from her absorbing occupation by the distant rattle of pony hoofs. Her nurse was in pursuit. The princess looked up eagerly at the

"Where is the Princess Susette?" demanded the nurse in sudden terror.

The sentry stared on at the gatepost opposite, but beyond the gate came a childish treble that the nurse knew. The Princess Susette was shricking with delight over her first mud ple.

The nurse grabbed the lines from the groom and urged the pony forward by jerking the lines backward after the manner of women. The sentry's horse moved majestically out from the gatepost and blocked the way.

"Get out of the way!" ordered the nurse furiously.

She jerked the pony's head and tried to turn by the sentry, but a great gauntlet caught the pony's bridle and held it in a vise. The pony, bewildered Action and Reaction That Product a Fit of the Blues.

Probably in two cases out of three the blues are caused by one's physical state. If a man has overworked of has been under any unusual strain of considering the blues are caused by one's physical or as been for a while in a state or joy and elation—all of which require at expenditure of energy—he is very likely to have the blues and to be in low spirits by way of reaction.

The body is a machine which can do a certain amount of work and no more if it does a great deal today, it must do less tomorrow and thereby make up for today's extravagance. If a man takes one glass of whisky, the slight stimulus that he feels will be followed as night follows day, by an exactly equivalent sinking of the spirits. If he has been thoroughly and gayly drunk his recovery will be attended by corresponding melancholia and misery.

When a man has the blues, he ought to consider that he is merely an ponent of one of nature's laws and that he has no right to harass others witt complaints. The Democratic City Committee are barking up the wrong tree when they tackle Ald Felch, and undertake to "discipline" him.

It will surprise no person who is acquainted with the character of a majority of the present City Council to learn that the steam roller scheme was successful at a special meeting of that body held last Monday evening. Eight members voted for it, and 7 against it. The project was without merit, it was members voted for it, and 7 against it.

The project was without merit; it was a niversally condemned outside of the Council and the men who are to be benefitted by it; but that made no difference to the majority; it was a Democratic party measure and must go through. The taxpayers and people honestly interested in the prosperity of this city ought, by all means, to remember this, and similar acts of the majority of the Council in the next municipal campaign and rebuke such extravagance.

Petitions—sent to Committee on Police and Licenses—of James O'Donnell, and G. A. Boutwell, job wagon; nell, and G. A. Boutwell, job wagou; of T. Marchelletto, piano organ.

Committee on Police and Licenses reported favorably on the following petitions for licenses to run hackney carriages:—B. J. Harkins, W. H. Boviard, Samuel Leeds, B. J. Meboviard, Samuel Leeds, B. J. Mesoniard, Samuel Leeds, B. J. Mesoniard carriages:—B. J. Harkins, W. H.-Boviard, Samuel Leeds, B. J. Mc Laughlin, F. A. Fitzgerald; also favorably on petition of R. P. E. Vary, license for picnic grove; of Marie Cocozza, to play accordion and sing on public streets; of B. Benjaminson, license to collect junk. All were accepted and adopted.

Ald Wood took exceptions to the conduct of President Brady who, although Acting Mayor in the absence of Mayor Feeney, cast votes for and against measures before the Board. He raised the question as a point of order, Ald. Wood appealed from the decision and the appeal was sustained. But that made no difference to Brady, he went on just as though his decision had been sustained. Why not? He is the Board.

Canned corn, tomatoes or fruits 6 for $1. Everything is reasonable and the town is full of provisions.

There is some work being done on a few of the creeks and a number of pay dumps are being taken out to clean up in the spring; but this isn't anything like the winter camp Dawson was; it is almost wholly a summer camp.

We have had two mails thus far this winter, one Jan. 18th, which contained a letter from home dated Oct. 7th, and another arrived on the 11th of this month. The mail service this winter is month. The mail service this winter is to the effect that the mail contract has the right to open letters which he thinks may contain newspaper clippings and throw them out, not bringing them through. This will keep many a poor fellow from receiving a long looked for letter this winter. Everybody is giving the Government and all who are connected with this mail business all the "Scotch blessings" they can think of.

Hope this will get through.

Boston Theatres.

"The Waltz Queens," as the peerless performers in the U. S. Talma Ladies Military band were dubbed by the Managers of the Charleston Exposition, are coming to Boston. Under the baton of the emment lady director, Helen May Butler, these accomplished artists will be seen and heard at Austin & Stone's museum, where their engagement opens on May 12 for a fortnight. The band is made up of 20 accomplished young women instrumentalists, including seven soloists, and there is no woman's band in America, at least, to compare with this. Urities who have heard the band at Buffalo and Charleston and elsewhere praise its music in superlatives.

Mizpah.

How many people know that the monument that Laban and Jacob set up near the borders of Canaan and called "Mizpah," or a lookout, was erected in suspicion rather than love? The literal meaning was this: "The Lord watch between thee and me when we are absent one from the other, and see that you are not up to some new trick as soon as my back is turned."

So when it is inscribed in an engagement ring it might mean, "The Lord strong solution of ammonia and how the strong solution of ammonia and how the strong solution of ammonia and how the see that you are not up to some new trick as soon as my back is turned."

Made His Reputation.
Adelina Patti was not always such a "gold mine" to managers as some may suppose, says Leslie's Weekly. When she visited New York in 1880, her manager, Signor Lu; J, overreached himself by starting out on a ten dollar admission basis, and the venture was a financial failure, notwithstanding Patti's great artistic success. She sang to a fourteen hundred dollar house on the first night and on the second to $400. She got discouraged, as it was her own venture, and gave it up.

The late Henry E. Abbey, who was bold in his speculations, then engaged her and her company at $5.000 per concert. He began at Wallack's old theater at Thirteenth street, giving scenes of opera, and the concerts there averaged over $7.000 a performance, but he lost in the out of town concerts $20,000.

At noon Miss Miffetts came to the switchboard. "I thank you. Thomas," said she sweetly. Tommy looked up. He took her all in in a glance—the trim little figure clad in unrelieved black save where a band of white set off her full throat, the wary black hair, the brown eyes that danced. It was all over in a moment.

The next day Tommy wore a new necktie and his Sunday shoes, and his hair was brushed to mirror datness. Did Miss Miffetts note the change? That problem worried him so much that he forgot the telephone once or twice and earned a choice collection of rather forcible epithets.

When he wasn't pondering the problem of his own appearance, he was watching Miss Miffetts as she bent over her machine. Before night he hated Doddleby, who had dared to speak to her with flippancy. Tompkins, too, had incurred his dislike for joking with her. But Esterbrook with his broad shoulders and his well fitting clothes. She was too friendly with Esterbrook. When they left the office together, Tommy was half tempted to follow. That fellow Esterbrook was not to be trusted.

As time went on Tommy's infatuation for the pretty stenographer grew. To all outward appearance Miss Miffetts took small notice of his existence. To make the probationer and was going to shake hands with him. Anticipating nothing short of high flown praise, the young man exclaimed, "My good sir, no compliments, in begit?" How bright the world was! More often she did not. The earth was a gloomy spot after all. After awhile he cherish ed other desperate ambitions. He hoped that the building would burn down and he could carry her to the street in his arms. Then again he waited for Esterbrook to insult her. The position meant nothing to him. He could secure another within the space of a day, but to be separated from Miss Miffetts, to leave her to the unprotected designs of Esterbrook! Decidedly he could not leave. The telephone service improved.

Then came the eventful Sunday. The evening before Miss Miffetts came to his desk. "Won't you come over to see me tomorrow afternoon? Come promptly at 3, Tommy."

The Action of a Spinet.

The spinet instrument was an improvement upon what was known as the clavichord, the tone of which, although weak, was capable, unlike that of the harpsichord or spinet, of increase or decrease, reflecting the finest gradations of the touch of the player. In this power of expression it was without a rival until the plano was invented. The early history of the clavichord previous to the fifteenth century rests in profound obscurity, but it is said that there is one bearing the date 1520 having four octaves without the D sharp and G sharp notes. The spinet was the invention of the Venetian Spinetta.

POLITICS and— CORNELIA

"A man in my position," he said "is called upon to do many Cornelia subdued a laugh behind her fan. How funny he was! Cornelia had a provoking sense of humor and was always seeing jokes where none was intended.

She moved her rocker farther into the shadow and looked down on the man in the full glare of the street lamp. He had his profile turned at just the right angle, as usual. It was a hand-some profile, and Cornelia was so used right ange.

some profile, and Cornelia was so used to it that when, on one occasion, he failed to present it directly she asked him, with one of her slow, inscrutable smiles, to do so. He did not see the sarcasm beneath her fun, and his insufferable conceit was undoubtedly fastered.

"Disagreem."

"Oh, dear, how sad! Do you have to say who is to go? It must be very

"It is. There are other things that for example. Hardly a day passes but tate a few lines of stuff just to satisfy him, but it's a bore to have him come, especially when he comes again be-cause the letter was no good."

"But aren't the letters any good?" asked Cornella in real surprise. "I thought you had such—oh, such won-derful influence now. I thought any letter of yours would get any one any-thing."

The man looked up with a grim

"Ob, of course I can get anything I really want," he said. "I've fixed several men from my state very comforta-oly, but these others are just boys, Miss Cornella, looking out for a soft snap. We men can't be bothered with Miss Cornella, looking out for a soft snap. We men can't be bothered with recommending kids."

"Weren't you ever a kid yourself.
Mr. Stokes?" was on Cornelia's lips, but she checked them in time. She was thinking of one kid in particular who like these others was looking for a soft snap. At least, he had told Cornelia it was a soft snap because it meant $4.500 a year to him and something more precious besides, but there was hard work in it, and he knew it. Cornelia knew all about it. When "the kid" had asked her to marry him it was not because she admired his classic profile (even she could hardly call it that), and instead of biaming herself and fate she had found that life had suddenly become grander, sweeter and better worth the living. She wished she could ask this man to help him, to give him the letter the commissioner required and which she knew the boy was going to request. That hateful red tape! The commissioner had said, "Yes, unobthedly young Beale is the man for the place, but how are we to give it to him when he seems to have no political backing at all, whereas that fellow Morris, who hasn't the senae he was born with, has the whole senate or near it?"

"The kids don't understand the tricks of the trade, you see," the man went on. "They think a letter's a letter and go off grinning, expecting to be in the cabinet in four years and president in leight. They're too soft to know that nine out of ten letters are shams and near the place of the cabinet in four years and president in leight. on. They think a retter a re-go off grinning, expecting to be in the cabinet in four years and president in eight. They're too soft to know that nine out of ten letters are shams and not worth the paper they're written

Cornelia felt a distinct batred of this Cornella felt a distinct hatred of this man who could speak so cruelly. How she detasted him for saying "kids!" She wished he would go.

"How do you manage with the recipients of the letters?" she asked, to make conversation. "Don't they honor all from the Hon. Glibert Stokes?" "No." be replied. "They all know the little finishing touch that makes it important. If we mean what we say and really want a fellow to get a job, and really want a fellow to get a job, we pin a visiting card to the top of the letter. If there's no card, it means no letter. If there's no card, it means no job. Simple, isn't it? When the letters go by hand, the boys think it's a little dodge to prevent forgery or something of that sort, and we never have any trouble."

Cornelia's throat tightened. "I—I don't see how you can do that," she said stiffly. "But—but I suppose"—with a swift change of tone—"you can't help it, of course. And how do you do it?" you do it?"

"It's not much of a story," he said, and it was not, but Cornella listened with breathless interest and was glad more one own room. Hastily selecting a visiting card from the tray on her desk, she planed it to the letter and closed the envelope. Her heart was beating wildly, and her futtering hands could hardly hold the letter. She stood an instant undecided, the "Pear God," she whispered, "don't let it be, and it is the only way." She kneit a moment with bowed head, then went quietly down stairs.

"Mother thinks it is lovely, dear," she said. "See! I have closed it for you, with all my love and best wishes for its success. Won't the lower of the said there was no long? Grocer's Apprenticed and the said there was no long? The success. Won't the lower of the said there was no long? The success. Won't the long of the success. Won't the long of the success. They went out together and posted it. They went out together and posted it. In the evening the man came again.

"A queer thing happened yesterday," he said. "You remember our talk last week about writing letters of introduction? Well, I wrote one yesterday for that young fellow Beale—you know him, I believe—and my man failed to put the card in. I want Beale to get the place. He's a really capable man.

HAVE WOMEN INTUITION! One Writer Says They Have Never Shown It In Literature.

Micawber, a Dogberry, a Faistaff, a Colonel Newcome, a Bilfil, a Parson Adams or Bob Acres, call a woman a Mrs. Majaprop, a Becky Sharp, a Bea-trice, a Diana Vernon, a Meg Merrilies, and even the illiterate will mentally classify the individual as you wish him or her to be classified.

"Ab, but," you say, "in real life women are the true intuitions. They size up a man or a woman at a glance. They are never mistaken when they trust to their instincts."

I can only testify to my own experience. I have not found that women's snap judgments of character are imbued with any special verity. They form likes or dislikes quicker than a man does because they are quicker on the trigger of conjecture. They can the trigger of conjecture. They can only be one of two things, right or only be one of two things, right or wrong. "Some folks," says a New York hotelclerk, "are so easily 'hornswoggled." Oh, that's Greek, I guess, and means that you are fooled. Now, for instance, a man in a restaurant the other day ordered broiled mackerel, and he atte it with great relish, loudly declaring that broiling is the only way to cook mackerel. But was his mackerel broiled? Not much. It is too much trouble to broil a fish, so the cook put it in a pan and fried it and then made burned lines across it with a redhot poker kept in readiness for such emergen cles. So the man was 'hornswoggled;" but, as he didn't know it, he was as happy as though he had really eather broiled mackerel. I tell you, imagination is three-fourths of life."

as reported to me by the late Professor Bonamy Price. One day as he was walking with the poet in the hills he asked him what he meant precisely by the words "fallings from us, vanishings." Wordsworth's answer was to this effect: "Sometimes I find myself in a mood in which the whole material universe seems to fall away. The sense of outward things is lost. Nothing remains but an immaterial self, detached from all physical conditions. In order to get back into the known world of consciousness I have to clutch at something—so." Here he grasped the bar of the gate on which they were leaning at the moment. I was much struck by the story at the time and made a note of it.

Origin of the Wedding-Ring.

The wedding-ring is the subject of quaint historical facts and endless superstitions. It was probably chosen as the symbol of marriage more for convenience than anything else. It is supposed to be a symbol of unbroken love and of power, and to carry special curative virtues with it. The old good-luck say-weak, and to carry special curative virtues with it. The old good-luck say-weak, and carry and the standard weak, and that a delicate nerve ran directly from the "ring-finger" to the heart, and that the ring placed on that finger was very closely connected with the heart. In early Christian marriages the bride-groom put the ring first on the bride's thumb, then on the first finger, then on the second, and, last of all, on the third, saying as he did: "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." The thumb and first two fingers represented the Trinity, the next finger represented the Trinity, the next finger spreads and the second and was left on, to show that, next to Chug was left on, to show that, next become the woman, "he made me such a grain present."—Century Magazine.

It Was a Monkey.
I was invited, along with other Europeans on the beach, to one of the biggest plays that have been seen in Opobo, At the feast all kinds of fish, fow and soup, cooked after the native fashion, were served. Every one thoroughly enjoyed the feast until, near to the finish, the chaser (dessert) was brought in. This dish they called palm oil chop. While it was being served there rolled out of the vessel what to all appearance was a human skull. Suddenly all the Europeans turned pale, as though suffering from an acute attack of seasickness, and the symptoms they developed were identical, for that dinner would not stay down.

The chief, in alarm, inquired what had made his friends so ill. One of the sufferers, whose eyes protruded from their sockets, and afraid to trust himself to speak, placed his handkerchief to his mouth and jerked his thumb in their direction of the skull.

An Expressive Postscript.

A curious postscript was once added to a letter by General Israel Putnam. A spy named Palmer, sent by Sir Henry Clinton, the British commander, had been detected furtively collecting information of the force and condition of the post at Peckskill and had undergone a military trial. A vessel of war came up the Hudson in all haste and landed a Putnam from Clinton claiming the said Palmer as a fleutenant in the British service. Putnam repiled:

When a woman is sick she falis off in looks. This is particularly the case when she suffers from diseases peculiar to her sex. Not only is her strength undermined, but she loses beauty of face and grace of form.

It is characteristic of the cures of womanly diseases effected by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that with restored health there is a restoration of good looks.

"Favorite Prescription" establishes inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

The influence of light makes itself felt more plainly on topazes and garnets. The garnet turns much paler in a short time, while the topaz assumes a darker shade and even loses the brillancy possessed by it when freshly cut.

The most sensitive stone in this respect is the opal. This stone draws its marvelous rainbow reflections from numerous little clefts, which allow the light to pass, and reflect it in different directions. Often the opal stands the manipulations of cutting and polishing well, and all of a sudden it splits.

FOR THE HONOR OF A: PRINCESS By F. K. Scribner

The Duke de Biart, a nobleman of Strange it was that the duke had not bided his time until the king were ready for a royal wedding. As for me, humble lieutenant of the musketeers numble leutenant or the musketeers that I am, I knew that the princess loved him not, for I had been chosen by his majesty to guard her person and saw her daily. "Zounds:" said he, snapping his fingers briskly. "Methinks this Duke de Biart hat o'ershot the mark. Plotting was bad enough, yet he must need, having ridden with his princess beyond the walls, lay violent hands upon her person. Had he but waited, the king's desire had given her to him."

To my mind also came the thought the man must be truly mad; but, despite the weight of the occasion, something within me rejoiced that it lay within me rejoiced that it lay. "The duke's dwelling lay some leagues."

The duke's dwelling lay some leagues.

"Sir," said he very softly, "what would you with this lady?"

Little Waldo—Yes, ma'am.

Teacher—Can you tell me something about them?

Little Waldo—They are pieces of pork entirely surrounded by beans.—Chicago Record-Herald.

"Aye, the good king," he muttered.
"We were to dine together. What of the king?"

De Rossel stepped across the threshold. "The man is mad," he whispered, "In the old Bible significance it is power intrusted to one for a specific use. Everybody has some talent worth cultivating. The more we use what we originally have the greater becomes its walue.—Ladies' Home Journal.

"'Tis a most strange thing." muttered De Rossel as we followed the servant through the long and dimly lighted corridor. "beyond comprehension, and methinks there comes a queer twist to our errand. Either this duke be drunk or truly mad; therefore look to it, M. de Marc, that no trap be set for us."

Presently we came unto the door of a chamber, and the servant drew back, signifying 'twas the room wherein was confined the princess.

aside. I entered without ceremony, then paused, for the princess was before me.

Aroused by the sound of voices in the antechamber she had risen from a couch and confronted me. The hair light touched her with a glow soft as moonlight, revealing the whiteness of her skin, the gentle curve of her throat and neck and the veiled splendor of the soft, dark eyes.

"My lord," sald she, "what means this intrusion? "Tis but poor courtesy which sends thee hither when I would be alone."

She took me for the Duke de Biart. The shadow of the draperies concealed my features, and I being somewhat the size of the nobleman the mistake was easy. I took a step toward her, the gleam of my hilt flashing in the light. She started, her hand going to a little toy dagger which lay upon the table at her side. Suddenly the color which had risen to her cheeks died away, her lips parted and her hand went to her heart.

"M. de Marc," she cried, "M. de Marc, 'tis thou! Thou will save me from 'the Mediterranean and an under current from the Mediter and the care from the from the Mediter and th

Wild Animals Still Plentiful.

Most boys have the idea that wild animals are very rare now, or that you must go into the far West to find them. While this is true of some of the large kinds, it is yet safe to say that any one in the Eastern States can, within five miles, and usually much less, get into a region where he may discover some wild creatures. He may walk through a place alive except a few birds, but is, and the except a few birds, but is, and is except as few birds, but is, and is except as few birds, but is, and it is published by the fact that their deadig enemy was passing near. Hallfax.

The evil repute of Hallfax implied in the adage "Go to Hallfax!" came to it by inheritance from Hallfax in Yorkshire, England. Hallfax law, as may be gathered from a letter of Lord Leicester quoted by Motley, was that criminals should be "condemned first and inquired upon afterward."

who was recently observed caimly knitting a stocking while waiting in the smoking room of the house of commons. At the present day the sight of a man plying the knitting needles is a novel one, though in the remoter parts of Scotland it is not at all uncommon. Less than half a century ago, however, the greater part of the stockings worn were knitted by the men folk, the women confining their attention more or less to spinning.

The shepherd starting out at the break of day to his duties on the hill would as soon have forgotten his lunch of oaten cakes and barley bannocks as his knitting needles and wool. THE KING SNAKE.

He is the Deadly Enemy of Every Poisonous Reptite.

Of all kind provisions of nature perhaps the manner in which snakes are brought into the world is the most remarkable. As a rule all harmless snakes are hatched from eggs, arriving in batches of from thirty to eighty. The poisonous snakes, on the other hand, are born in litters of from sevent to eleven in number. There we exceptions to the rule, of course, but they are few and unimportant, for though the deadly king cobra lays heregs to be hatched by the sun, they are few in number, unlike the colonies deposited by the harmless snakes.

Chief among the enemies of the snakes are the reptiles themselves. Cannibalism is general among the creatures, the smaller snake serving as food to the larger one. But chief of all snakes that hunt their own kind for the pleasure of slaughter is the long, slender king snake, a constrictor by habit and a flash in his movements. Among all reptiles the king snake alone may truly be said to be the friend of man. He is found throughout the whole south, where the rattler and prepting for slaughter. Somewhere along in the thirties there was a case on trial in one of the circuit courts in that section in which an effort was made to impeach the testimony of one of the witnesses. The evidence was conflicting. Some would not.

"For Instance, including substitutes, there are 275 carriers in Washington. You may have observed that carriers, when riding on the surface roads, do not pay fares either with tickets or in cash. The free delivery system allots the Washington city postoffice an annual allowance of $4,000 to be used exclusively for the car fare of letter carriers. "This rule obtains in some cities, while he obtains in some cities, while he others special tickets are sold at special rates to be used only by carriers, or the cash is handed direct to the carrier for a certain number of daily trips, depending upon the practice. Thus, while Washington receives $4,000, Chicago gets $25,000 for letter carriers' car fare because of its large territorial extent and distance between stations on the prairie, oftentimes necessitating a double fare by the carrier. Rather Ridieulous.

Very few people's noses are set propperly upon their faces. Any observant person who will go along the street and take notice of the masal organs of the passerby may easily convince himself on the subject. Not one individual in a hundred, whether man or woman, is above criticism as to the arrangement of his or her nose.

One might think that nature is a little carcless about this matter. When the nose turns off at an angle instead of assuming its just and proper atti-

FOURIER THE PROPHET.

"I am silly to be so affected by an ordinary case. There are thousands like him. But—ob, dear, ob, dear! If I'd known I was to have this sad experience, I would never have consented to come—never!"

They had no opportunity to meet alone for several days. Perhaps they might have made opportunities but they did not. Doubtless it occurred to each of these two lunaties that it was the wiser thing to stifle at once any friendship which each thought likely to cause useless pain in the future to the other.

Dr. Bell found these two of his residents particularly interesting in those days, and so did the attendant. It was strange that they both so markedly preferred the company of the sanitarium people to that of their fellow unfortunates. The young house doctor thought Miss Tracy charming and never was abrupt with her when she sought him in his office, as he was compelled to be for self protection with some who wanted to see him half a dozen times a day.

"Very puzzling case," he mused.
"Now, why does she dwell so on that recent death? It seems to excite her too. That's morbidity, I'm afraid; basign."

The doctor liked St. John too. St. John's friends acted very nicely in sending him new books and boxes of cigars. The books were well chosen; the cigars were unexceptionable.

"Like all these pareties," he pondered.

"If yor friend came in, he'd think in and," said she.

"If your friend came in, he'd think in and," said she.

"If your friends came in, he'd think in and," said she.

"Two lunatics," he answered, laugh ing, as the door opened.

When Coins Were First Made.
Certain passages in the "lilad" of Homer would lead to the inference that coins of brass were struck as early as 1184 B. C. Tradition affirms that the Chinese had bronze coins as early as 1120 B. C. But Herodotus, "the father of history," ascribes the 'invention" of coins to the Lydians, about nine centuries B. C., and there is no satisfactory evidence that coins were known prior to that date.

It must be a double track or a failure to accommodate the traveling public. If the public are not properly accommodated the interests of the Company must suffer. What, then, is to be done? The question is easily answered. The Railroad Company should pay an equitable share of the expense of widening Main street for the double tracks. With less than this the City Council ought not to be satisfied.

The first extends up to the sixth or eighth year and is one of very rapid growth; the second period, from eleven to fourteen years, growth is slow; the third period, from sixteen to seventeen; the fourth period shows a slow growth up to the age of thirty for height, up to fifty for chest girth; the fifth period is one of rest, from thirty to fifty years; the sixth period is characterized by a decrease in all dimensions of the body.

Thalla never was able to recall just what was said by either at first. The unexpectedness of the meeting made both perfunctory. Then Thalla relaxed.

"I was determined if it were you that you should not go out of town until we had talked over old times. How is Helen? Did you bring her with you?"

"I am here alone on business," he said, with a grave dignity which seem ed to reprove her flippant manner. "I shall be here ten days only at the furthest. He was a good little boy, and he lived not many miles from Boston. He never disobeyed his mother, he never called her names when her orders were not his wishes, and he had the face of an angel. Next door lived little Rosy, a girl who proved the proverb about small pitchers. One day Harry was allowed to go over to play with Rosy, but with strict orders not to take off his hat and coat to go in the house if Rosy could not come out into the yard. The music throbbed in Thalia's veins. Her throat swelled, but she met his gaze steadily.

After that they were more or less formal.

Judge Ballard's tall, dignified figure seemed to grow rigid.

"And why have you sent your promised husband away?" he asked as if cross examining a witness.

"My promised husband?" gasped Thalia. "Why, I've just refused him."

"My darling! My darling!"

He snatched her in strong arms and showered on face and hair fervent and specifically injudicial kisses not provided for in the statutes of Blackstone. Thalia, haif drowned in this lawless onslaught, finally managed to partially free herself and to pant indignantly, "How dare you!"

He only said, "I couldn't help it," like any schoolboy, but he looked totally unrepentant and remained in dangerous proximity.

An Argument For Social Frankness.

It is best to be sincere, as a family in Germantown recently found out. They had been entertaining a distinguished novelist from abroad who was not altogether acquainted with society's way of saying things it does not mean. The time came for her departure, and as the host was handing her to the carriage he said very courteously, "I am sorry you cannot stay longer."

To which came the unlooked for retort, "Oh, but I can!"

There was only one course open. The trunks were taken down, the carriage sent away, and to the constrention of so strong a fear that we shall have courage to face whatever others may say of our right doing.

The general postoffice at Paris once received a letter addressed "To Monsieur, My Son, Rue —," etc. They were going to send it to what in France corresponds to our dead letter office, but a clerk objected.

"There must be two fools in that family," he said, "We shall find out to whom it belongs."

Sure enough, in a few days a stupid looking youth entered and said to the clerk:

GLADSTONE'S ORATORY.

One Critic Likens It to the Rushing of Waters in a Tempest.
Glastone was a great financier and perhaps the very greatest expositor of finance who ever lived. He had a magical influence over masses of men and a power of words the effect of magical influence over masses of men and a power of words the effect of which was more like that of huge masses of water in a tempest than anything else. His Midlothian speeches wade one think less of a river coming down than of the sea coming up. His will in constructing a difficult measure was not even approached by any man of his time and perhaps was never exceeded by any man at any time.

These and many other merits we must freely allow him, but when the final estimate of him is made snany traits must be introduced and not least traits must be introduced and not least traits must be introduced and not least his extraordinary power of believing precisely what he wished to believe. He had a tender conscience, but, save only where finance was concerned, he only where finance was concerned, he had at conscience theroughly under command. If it showed the slightest recalcitrancy, his will was always ready to say, "Just you dare!"

And yet when all has been said for and against him there can be no doubt that he will remain the most notable Englishman of his generation—as much out of place among the Liberals as Disraeli was among the Conservatives, but, like him, a head and shoulders above all his rivals and as much superior to Disraeli himself in most of the higher arts of statesmanship as that immensely clever child of Israel was superior to him in all its secondary arts.

The Seven Golden Cities.

The "Seven Golden Cities," one of the most popular legends of the latter part of the dark ages, were said to be situated on an island west of the African coast. The island is represented as abounding in gold, with magnificent houses and temples, "the high towers of which shone at a great distance." The legend also relates that at the time of the conquest of Spain and Portugal by the Moors, when the inhabitiants fled in every direction to escape slavery, seven bishops, followed by a great number of people, took to ships and put boldly out on the high seas. After tossing about for some time they landed on an unknown island, the falanded on an unknown island, the fa-mous spot which in after years became the seat of the "Seven Golden Cities." "This island," Heylyn says, "was exactly in midocean." After all had landed safely the wise old bishops geography almost without knowing it.

The voyage forms a perfect introduction to the study of mudology and suggests to the observant mind (meaning you and me) the real nature of mud as nothing else on earth that I know of can suggest it, for in Egypt you get your phenomenon isolated, as it were, no local streams, no complex denudation. The Nile does it all, and the Nile does everything. On either hand stretches away the bare desert, rising up in gray, rocky hills. Down the midst runs the one long line of alluvial soil—in other words, Nile mudwhich alone allows cultivation and life in that rainless district. The country bases itself absolutely on mud. The crops are raised on it, the houses and villages are built of it, the land is manured with it, the very air is full of it. The crude brick buildings that dissove in dust are Nile mud solidified, the red pottery of Assiout is Nile mud baked hard, the village mosques and minarets are Nile mud whitewashed.

I have even seen a ship's bulwarks neatly repaired with mud. It pervades the whole land, when wet, as mud undisguised; when dry, as duststorm.—

Arabian Coffee.

The Arabian coffee maker, having prepared his fire of charcoal and placed near it a huge pot containing water, takes a few handfuls of green coffee berries, carefully culls out all imperfect berries and foreign substances and then places the best of the berries in an iron ladle held over the fire. The beruncharred, placed in a small mortar and carefully brayed with a pestle closely fitting the cup of the mortar. The berries are not, however, reduced to a dust. While this process has been to a dust. While this process has been going on, a small pot has been half filled with tepid water from the large pot and placed over the fire. When the water in the small pot has begun to boil, the broken coffee berries are thrown in, and the boiling is permitted to go on for a short time, the decection being stirred with a spoon when it shows signs of boiling over. The coffee is then served in small cups without cream or sugar.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Finer weather for Memorial Day ceremonies than that of last Friday could hardly have been imagined. It was bright and cloudless, neither too hot nor too cold, but nearly perfect.

Although the services presented few, if any, new features, many people came to town to witness them, the sidewalks, church lawns, and spaces around the Common, being well filled with interested men, women and children.

All business was suspended throughout the entire day, which was a respectful recognition of the sacredness of the occasion. Flags floated from staffs all over the city, and many places of business were appropriately decorbined.

The Post banquets and speeches were well attended and highly enjoyed.

The exercises in the evening at Lyceum Hall were excellent and appreciated by everyone present. The address of Rev. Charles H. Hickok gave entire satisfaction. The Order of Exercises for the Day was as follows:

Miss Sarah W. Chamberlain of 16 Wyer's Court has been appointed receiver and custodian of Woburn con receiver and custodian of Woburn con-tributions in aid of building another Congregational church at Montvale to take the place of the one burned early last Saturday morning. It is earnestly hoped that the contributions will be prompt and generous, for they are greatly needed in the church's present straits. The fire was the work of an incendiary, of which a plenty of evidence was found. Everything in and about the building was totally destroyed, and the builders of the new edifice must begin at the bottom. The church members had worked hard to free their

— The ferreting out and arrest of the four Montvale freebugs was solely the work of Chief McDermott. Suspecting that the frequent fires and false alarms in Montvale, a few weeks ago, were the work of a gang, he went at it in a quiet way to see what he could find out. Piece by piece he gathered evidence that the fires were of incentiary origin, and that members of a club organized for mischiet were the guilty parties. The Chief kept at work antil he allowed he had proof enough to convict the chaps, and then corralled four of them, A. L. Gay of Stoneham, Frank Howard, Thomas A Walsh and John Quigley, all of Montvale, and had them arraigned in Court Wednesday morning. The cases were continued until today. The lads are all 17 years old and over, but confessed to Chief McDermott their work in connection with the numerous fires. The Chief is entitled to a great deal of credit for working up this case and nabbing the offenders.

An historical address was delivered by Mr. Henry Martin Eames of Woburn, and the generat opinion seemed to be that we never had a better one here. It was listened to with profound attention. A correspondent of a Boston paper described the celebration as follows:

Recollections of the great Civil War were refreshed in Wilmington yesterday and the town participated in a dual ceremony commemorative of those who gave their lives to their country. The first of these exercises was the placing of flowers upon the graves in Wildwood cemetery, by G. A. R. Post 194 of Reading, Commander Krook, with the Boston & Maine Railroad Department Y. M. C. A. band participating.

The second was the unveiling of a rough-hewn granite slab, the town's tribute to the memory of her sons who paid the extreme sacrifice of loyalty. As the Veteraus returned from the graves they were drawn up in company front before the flag-draped monument,

It is duty of all lovers of religion and good morals to take hold and help the Montvale church out of their present difficulties.

A Town Meeting will soon be held to determine what shall be done about building a Town House to take the place of the one burned a few days ago. There is considerable conflict of opinion as to where a new one should be located, if built; but the general belief is that there will be no change from the site of the old House.

A Quakeress soon after that discovered that the old fashioned waffle, slightly saited and covered with melted butter, made an irreciatible accessory to the fish when well fried. This started the catfish and waffles, for which the City of Brotherly Love has ever since been famous. The habit spread like an epidemic, and, like the star of empire, its way was westward. So far as is known the United States government has no record of catfish and waffles cast of the Delaware river, but starting at Philadelphia a distinct catfish zone runs westward, terminating at Denver, reaching as far north as Minneapolis and St. Paul and as far south as Mobile and New Orleans. The catfish is said to possess medicinal virtue. It is mildly anæsthetic, soporific and antispasmodic.—New York Post. started the catfish and waffles, for

Reynolds once forgot the existence of one of his pictures. Burke once obtained a very early work and called on the great artist, submitting the work as that of a young student who sought advice from the master. Reynolds had a long look and then asked, "Is the painter a friend of yours?"

Burke replied in the affirmative.
"Well," replied the great man, "I really don't feel able to give an opinion. It's a cleverish thing, but whether it is of sufficient promise to justify the young man in adopting art as a profession I cannot say."

ANIMAL IMITATIVENESS.

How a Beggar's Dog Grows to B

And the Origin of the Philadelphia Habit of Catash and Waffles.

While pessimists have been denouncing the extension of the pie belt through the United States and the enlargement of the saleratus biscuit district, they have been entirely oblivious of the extraordinary development of the catash zone. This mischlevous dweller of the pool is known to the small boy and the rustic angler under many names—in one place as a sucker, in another a bullhead, in a third a wolf fish and, most outrageous of all, in northern Mississippi as a shad. But its own only genuine title is catish. The name is derived from the fact that when the creature is raised from the water it emits a grunting protest which poetical fishermen have pronounced like the purring of a family cat.

Philadelphia produced the catfish habit. For two conturies the animal was looked at as something which might be eaten to prevent starvation until one fine day a thrifty Quaker found that the catish would eat boiled cornmend and that this simple food not only fattened the eater, but changed the color of its belly from white to yellow. He perceived the pecuniary value of the discovery and established a catfish farm in which he fattened the fishes which he caught elsewhere and in due season sold them to the Philadelphia markets.

Food and Colds. Food and Colds.

A writer in The Lancet says: "Since I began to study diet I have been astonished at the number of cases of which I have heard, even of medical men, who by eating less and not so often have found that their susceptibility to colds has quite gone. Such facts as I have met with point to the conclusion that it is the system overcharged with the products of food which was not required and can act only as a poison to every organ in the body which is most susceptible to colds."

Ground For Suspicion "Mary," said the young matron's mother, "it seemed to me you were very cold to John this morning?" "Yes," she replied, "I'm beginning to "Yes," she replied, "I'm beginning to suspect him." "The idea! You have no reason to,

A WALKING PARTY

A WALKING PAR

Miss Chalmers and I spent much time on the plazza looking at the beautiful view far below, the fields of ripening corn and those from which the grain had already been cut, the whole resembling patchwork in a quilt, often watching for the afternoon stage to come lumbering up the incline, bringing the day's passengers from the station. Besides, we were both good walkers and tramped over every possible path within reach.

alone. My thoughts dwelt continually upon her, and I wished I might have upon her, and I wished I might have an opportunity to do something heroic that would commend me to her. I walked down the winding road in the direction of the station, passing the stage on its way up. Farther down I passed two men who scrutinized me closely, then passed on, saying: "There's a desperate character hiding in these mountains. We're looking for him. If he meets you, he might nak for a loan, He's very hard up." "What is he like?" I asked. "Reddish beard; sandy hair mixed with gray; sturdy fellow; cast in his left eye."

It occurred to me that he might be armed, but I thought how splendid I would feel to march him up to the plazza of the hotel in view of the guests, especially Miss Chaimers, and determined to take any risk.

Half an hour later I saw a man coming up the road—"reddish beard; sandy hair mixed with gray; sturdy fellow; let me get a look at his left eye."

There is a moment in my life that I guish, mortification, despair. A loved and loving one has done all in her power to cause me to forget it, but it is the sore spot of my existence. At the crucial moment I was walking before my captor up to the Mountain House.

At my left the setting sun was covering the wide stretch of fields below with glory, but I did not see it. The Thoughtful Stork.

On a tree close to a house, within a thort distance of the river or canal, there was a storks' nest, with young ones. The roof of the house caught fire one day, and, though the flames sidd not actually reach the tree, the hat became scorching. So the mother stork flew down to the water, got into it and drenched her breast; then, returning to her young, she spread the mass of cool, wet feathers all over them. This she repeated over and over again, flying to the river, going down into the water and returning, her plumage drenched with wet. And thus the nest was saved, and the tender nestlings were preserved alive until the fire had been got under and all was safe. The truth of this remarkable story was vouched for by more than one eyewitness.—Cornhill.

Military Crimes.

Hardship and privations do not improve the temper, and insubordination easily supervenes, while the tempation of drink, if it is to be had, is too often irresistible to weak but well meaning men long deprived of such dissipation. Another fruitful source of transgression which, if we are to trust vague reports, became at times epidemic was the almost natural surrender to physical exhaustion, says Major Arthur Griffiths in The Fortnightly Review, To sleep on sentry is one of the most serious of military crimes. The Boston Sunday Herald of June 8 contained a whole-page story of the Boston Elevated Railroad, and the man who is the President, Manager, Motorman, and Motor of that gigantic enterprise, Major General William A. Bancroft. Every line of the story, which by the way, is illustrated in the Herald's best style, is stuffed full of solid facts relating to the immense business of the Salem street residence into fine style. eral Bancroft is the head and front and conductor, and also "How General Bancroft Manages the Electric Road."

The System is a marvalous in the Bancroft Manages the Electric Road." The System is a marvelous instance of what enterprise, courage, brains and hard work can accomplish. The writer this paper. says his story of General Bancroft's tireless devotion to the interests of the Elevated and the amount of labor he performs as President of the Company, might be called "From 6 o'clock to 6 might be called "From 6 o'clock to 6 o'clock," or, "Every Day in the Year," and that is true, for he is the most industrious and hardest working public man in Boston. Fortunately he is physically tough, sturdy of mold, healthy, hearty, and can stand as much hard work, brain or hand, as the next man. The Herald's story is well worth anybody's perusal. The information it gives concerning the Elevated System, its underground, overground, overground,

To the Editor of the Boston Journal.

The following paragraphs are from the Memorial Day address delivered at Burnington, Vt., by Frederick C. Chamber-They would seem to account for much of the ignorant bitterness of the anti-imperialists, if not for their very raison d'etra for the milk in the occount.

"When I began to search for material for this address I was puzzled to explain how it was that these anti-imperialists could not see, what we evident to our soliders, namely, that by encouraging the enemy they were striking our men a blow from behind. Within the last en days I have discovered a satisfactory reason. The idea struck me of a sudder have discovered a satisfactory reason. The idea struck me of a sude that it was only those who had never beat it was only those who had never that it was only those who had never that it was only those who had never doing. It was their ignorance of a soldier's iffe. I noticed that the New England Anti-Imperialist League had a President, a Treasurer, Secretary and Executive Committee, seven active officers. Among these there was not a single old soldier, and I believe that very one of the seven was an ablebodied man in the time of the Rebellion. Then, they had 32 Vice Presidents; of the State was published that the wall which held them in safety, and no books or papers of value were destroyed. These were kept in the vault which held them in safety, and no books or papers of value were doing. It was their ignorance of a soldier's iffe. Surely I had found my explanation at last.

Surely I went further. I hanted up the accounts of the nine public meetings held by the anti-imperialists—eight in Boston and one in Cambridge. I found in them the mention of 203 names of men who had sat on the platform, presided, made speeches, written letters, offered resolutions, were officers of the organization or were noticed in the audience. After examining their history as carefully as possible. I find just three out of the whole 203 who served in the Rebellion, and two of these three were the two Vice Presidents before mentioned, and all of the three were commissioned officers. I cannot find a man among them who carried a musket, and he is the majority of the server of the commissioned officers. I cannot find a man among them who carried a musket, and he is the majority of the commissioned officers. I cannot find a man among them who carried a musket, and he is the majority of the commissioned officers. The Polonzelo Arrow.

"An arrow studded with the most costly of stones, tipped at both ends with pure virgin gold and headed with the feathers of the rarest birds." Such the description given of the "Polonzelo arrow," which in 1434 was presented to Sir John Dalcourt by a Spanish gentleman. This wonderful arrow ish gentleman. This wonderful arrow was made in 1204 by an ancestor of the Spaniard's, and every stone and jewel with which it was set was said to represent a human life cut short through its instrumentality. The stone ndicated the number of men to whom it had carried death, while the curiously fashioned gold and silver jewels represented the women who had fallen under its poisoned point.

A carving knife needs to have a dif-ferent kind of an edge from a razor. The steel which ordinarily accompa-nies a carving knife and fork is very edge, but an ordinary whetstone, such edge, but an ordinary wheetsone, such as a reaper uses for his scythe or sickle, is the most useful implement a carver can keep at hand. One or two rubs on each side of a knife whet it up mightily, and then two or three finishing Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroider a sacerdotal vestiment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

But the mistake had touched my Puritan conscience as well as my feminine pride. I was listening to a conversation manifestity not intended for my ears. Ought I to get down from the omnibus? That would be quixotic surely. I could not afford to be late to my appointment for the sake of two perfect strangers who would never know of my delicate kindness to them. Ought I to speak out frankly and say, "I beg your pardon, but I understand everything you are saying?" That would be embarrassing for us all and really revel to Mr. Henley, who had been trying for so long to propose. When a man is in such straits that he has to make love on the top of an omnibus, he ought not to be wantonly interrupted. It was plainly my duty to keep quiet.

FRIDAY, JUNE 20, 1902

Bunker Hill Day opened auspictiously, for a fairer, brighter June morning never, or hardly ever, dawned on the world hereabouts. Aurora fetched along with her a cloudless sky, an atmosphere tempered with a sweet west wind of moderate force, and everything seemed to conspire to make a perfect day. And "what is so rare as a day in June?" Lowell once asked. The American Flag appeared in great profusion at early morn, and business The American Flag appeared in great profusion at early morn, and business prepared to close its doors and enjoy a day's outing. Some of the stores, shops and markets did not open their doors at all during the day; others did business during a few hours of the forenoon; and the after part was devoted to pleasure and celebrating the anniversary of the first great battle of the Revolution fought on Breed's Hill, Charlestown, on June 17, 1775. The liveliest interest is being taken by the merchants of Boston, who always respond cheerfully when the reputation of the city for hospitality is at stake. The Merchants' Association and the Chamber of Commerce have joined hands in this work, and are acting together. Both bodies have appointed committees to make arrangements for a trip in the Harbor, to show to the visiting delegates the City's facilities for a great export trade and its value to the country at large as a shipping port.

They also recognize the need for raising the four or five days of the convention, and they have, with that object in view, made an appeal for financial assistance, with full confidence that the responses will be prompt and liberal, as they always have been whenever distinguished public bodies have visited Boston.

The red ribbon which superseded the titular distinction of pre-Napoleonic days has rarely been given to women, but it has a feminine side for all that. Napoleon, after Austerlitz, founded three spiendid educational establishments for the daughters of the decorated. Most of the women who have been admitted to the order have been superintendents of these establishments. Marie Laurent was honored not as an actress, but as president of one of these institutions. An exception was made in the case of the late Rosa Bonheur, upon whom the cross of the Legion was conferred in 1865. It was a shock certainly, but the blow was softened somewhat by the compliment to my clothes. Aren't the Parisiennes considered the best dressed women in the world?

But the mistake had touched my Puritan conscience as well as my feminine pride. I was listening to a conversation manifestly not intended for my ears. Ought I to get down from the omnibus? One of the most common devices used on the American flags during the early part of the Revolutionary struggle was an embroidered rattlesnake above or below the legend "Don't tread on me."

The origin of this design has been traced to a remark made by Ben Franklin. At the time the flag was adopted, or immediately before, England was shipping her criminals to America and turning them loose on the defenseless colonists. After several murders had been committed by these unwelcome immigrants Ben Franklin (some say in a joking spirit suggested that the colonists retalliate by sending a cargo of rattlesnakes to the mother country and turning them out in the gardens of the nobles.

The tones of the elder man's voice ceased, and to John Ringwood, standing before him, it seemed that the whole world was suddenly enveloped in a mist of red shame. When Ringwood spoke, his accents were curiously quiet and constrained, for was he not addressing Molly's father?

Morris left the taunt unanswered, and just then the library door swing open, and a curly haired boy of sixteen pushed in with spoiled freedom.
"Everything's gone to sleep on the ranch," he said pettishly, "When's Markham and Molly coming home?"
"Your brother said he would bring your sister home by S o'clock," returned Morris.

It might be a harmless passing stranger, and they did not care for the noise of a fusiliate just now.

after one of Hannah's love charms, and she turned as red as you please."

"Try to telk sense," said his father irritably, and Ringwood crossed to the sunset fires die to an ashen gray.

"So rose the fire of my hopes," he thought. "Like this, it died in bitter

When light came again, the moon was pouring down her full splendor. Over him bent two anxious faces, while his own reeked of the whisky used to bathe his forehead and temples. "No, only stunned," returned their patient, rising obstinately to his feet, but glad to cling to the nearest saddle to steady himself, the earth whirled Then on the heels of the negro stumbled in Lee Hung, the cook, who had been granted an afternoon off. Blanched to the palest of yellows, he stammered out a tale in his almost incomprehensible lingo which, translated, ran as follows:

HE WANTED TO GO HOME.

Georgin Boy's Unique Excuse For Getting Out of His Work.
One Saturday in July, says J. H.,
Hale in the World's Work, I came upon a boy of fifteen or sixteen crying as though his heart wound break, In reply to my inquiry I was told, "Mother is dead, and I want to go home!" Of course, I said to him, "Well, go and see the superintendent, and he will give see the superintendent, and he will give see the superintendent, and he will give you an order on the office." The boy moaned, "I dun see him, and he won't let me off till bell time."

let me off till bell time."

This seemed hard when one boy's work would count for so little among several hundred, so I took him in the buggy and hurried back to the offlee, giving an order that he be paid off and let go at once; but I was politely told that "the superintendent's orders are that no one is to be paid till night."

After I had insisted in rather strong language that I might possibly be a bigger man than even the superintendent the lady assistant began a series of sharp questions, finally bringing out the date of "mothers" death as "de 20th ob last Feb'ry!" I sneaked off, realizing that there were some phases of the peach business I had better not meddle with.

"And so," he said, wondering vaguely if he were the same John Ringwood who ten minutes ago had asked so hopefully for the girl's hand—"and so, sir, this is your objection to me—because my father was a—a—coward"—the word came out with a gasping sound—"you think I must be one also."

"Blood tells," returned Henry Morris hoarsely. "But remember, lad, I would never have forced this painful knowledge of mine on you if you had not compelled me to say why I could not trust my girl to you. Your father's shame, known only to you and me, would have slept with him in his grave but—you would know!"

"That will do," said Ringwood thickly. "I am my father's son, as you say. There is no chance here, or I might prove to you that God does not always make us mere copies of those who go before. But that is idle. There is one before. But that is idle there is one before. But that is idle there i

Only two horses! Young Morris flashed an astounded look on their guest. Was that dogged indifference real? Of course nothing was expected from Lee or the negro, but this handsome Saxon with frank, gray eyes—could he fall them in such need?

THE THING IN BRIEF.

where is it?

The Franklin Square House, for many years known as the New England Conservatory of Music, is one of the mest conspicuous buildings in the whole South End region of Boston. It is located on the corner of East Newton and St. James streets, having a very large area on both streets. The beautiful Franklin Square lies immediately in front, and a large open space filled with trees in the rear.

WHAT IS IT?

Some discussion has arisen in the papers as to the name the house, as well as the enterprise, ought to bear. It did not, take long for the projectors of this enterprise to settle down upon the simple not enterprise to settle down upon the simple name. 'Franklin Square House.' Needed as this great work is, it should be no discredit to the name already rich and honored with noble associations.

THE KEED.

Let us, then, center our inquiry directly upon the need of such an enterprise, Very many the need of such an enterprise, by the need of such an enterprise, when girls, and other girls, with moderate income story further will be made by those who are interested in Franklin Square House, village and oldering. With many it is difficult even to live. The very smallness of the army in between the income and necessary outgo becomes a new peril. The attempt will be made by those who are interested in Franklin Square House will be conducted on thorough business principles, it will not be run for the finabelal profit of any individual or set of individuals. It is a corporation organized under the laws of Massachusetts to carry out a definite work for individuals. It is a corporation organized under the laws of Massachusetts was the prince consistent with comfort and health.

Not you have to pay out too large a power of the general good. It was a complete the prince progress of the principles of the

On the other hand, we propose making the Franklin Square House in its practi-cal operation entirely self-supporting. The residents of the house are not to be regarded as objects of charity. Every self-respecting girl is sensitive on this point, and justly so. They are to pay their way, pay for all they get; but, at the same time, they are to have a great deal for what they pay.

the same time, they get; but, at the same time, they are to have a great deal for what they pay.

SOCIAL AND EDUCATIONAL ADVANTAGES. As already suggested, the Franklin Square House will be much more than a boarding of the groups of the dealing house. It is the purpose of the louse an educational and social centre for all residents who may care for these advantages.

COST OF LIVING.

In the average lodging house of Bostom agirl must pay for a small half room $1.50 per week; she must then pay $35 for a 21-meal ticket in a third-class restaurant, the food of which is often unpalatable and unwholesome. She has in these two items, without laundry, a weekly expense of $4.50. It is the hope of the friends of the Franklin Square House to give board, lodging, heat, light. nurse's and physician's services, when girls are all, not to mention social and educational privileges, for an average cost not far from the figures mentioned above. In other words, the aim will be give girls the largest possible constort at the smallest possible const.

The Franklin Square House will be run on principles of mutual trust. We shall aim at the smallest possible abridge.

The Franklin Square House will be run on principles of mutual trust. We shall aim at the smallest possible abridge-ment of personal liberty consistent with good reputation and the comfort of all.

NON-SECTARIAN. NON-SECTABLAN.

The Franklin Square House shall be entirely non-sectarian its doors shall swing wide open to Frotestant and Catholic, to Jew and Gentile. No tests of creed shall be made, and no efforts to prosslyte.

A TRANSIENT DEPARTMENT.

Besides the home department for regular residents, there will be a transient department, maintained for girls who are looking for work, for students coming to the city but not yet settled, for young women spending a day or two in the city, and others passing through or stopping for a few days.

A "Lot" of Land.

A Hartford lawyer is of the opinion that the term "lot" as applied to a parcel of land is an American product, not derived from any other uses of the word. He says: "I have been reading up some of the old histories of my state, of Long Island and other colonial sections recently, and I find that the term "lot of land" was originated from the custom of dividing grants for townships, etc., into parcels of land and then numbering each parcel, putting the numbers into a hat or whatever was used and then having them drawn out by those who were to occupy the land. Each man took the parcel corresponding to his number, so his land came by lot literally, and hence the use of the term. This, I presume, is ancient history, but perhaps ancient enough to have been forgotted by most real estate dealers and other people who deal in land and not language."

Superstitious About Bees.
The superstitious which connect bees with the death or sickness of the members of the particular family in which they are kept are interesting. In Scotland and Ireland the entrance of a bee into a cottage, more particularly if it be a bumblebee, is looked upon as a certain sign of the death of some one then residing there. In other localities if bees in swarming settle upon dead wood it is regarded as equally ominous.
